Writing your personal Manifesto

“A Manifesto is a published verbal declaration of the intentions, motives, or views of the issuer, be it an individual, group, political party or government.”

A Manifesto is the beginning of your journey. Consider it an anchor to your core values. Some words might change, even some values might increase. However, your Manifesto, set in writing, is your compass for the future-you that you can read again at a different time and think:

“This is what I truly believe and stand for. I need to focus on this”

Manifest yourself in YOUR world, with YOUR beliefs and YOUR values. Use it as YOUR compass for future journeys so you will no longer feel lost between chapters.

1. The ground rules:

Remind yourself that you write the Manifesto for YOU not who might read it. There is no such thing as a bad Manifesto, just an unfinished one. Meet yourself where you're at in life and take it from there. The whole intention is that the Manifesto is YOUR declaration for life and how YOU want to live and uphold it.

You are the maker of your own rules so let's start with writing down why you want to write your own Manifesto.

I'm writing my Manifesto for...

2. Poor the foundation:

Write down all the words that have meaning to you. Make a list of as many words as you can think of. You'll only be using 8 to 12 of your keywords, however everything of value to you can be used in your Manifesto.

Keep it simple. Life is as complicated as you make it. 3, 2, 1, GO...
